Diners arriving at the sweet farmhouse on Route 27, hoping to have dinner at Eleven Madison Park's Summerhouse, or hitting the waterfront spot on Three Mile Harbor eager to enjoy the creations of chef Eric Miller along with the sunset at Bay Kitchen and Bar, will be surprised to find those restaurants are gone.

But so it goes each new season, new ones have taken their place. The dining rooms and venues look similar each summer, but each spring, fresh places blossom at many of the familiar sites, bringing new menus and new owners to town. Below, a guide to some of the most promising new spots out east this year.

Amagansett

Coche Comedor

Rotisserie fish and birds enhanced with Mexican spices, as well as moles and ceviches, are the draw at this spot opened by Nick and Toni's owners Mark Smith and Toni Ross, who also own nearby taqueria La Fondita. Some of the produce will be sourced from their own gardens; sangria will flow from taps and fresh margaritas range from tamarind to prickly pear. 74A Montauk Hwy., between Oak and Three Sisters lanes, Amagansett; (631) 267-5709
